Multi-support shoes

Raised upper – plus a sturdy arthrodesis cap

The multi-support shoe has an even more raised upper than our support shoe, plus a sturdy arthrodesis cap. This area can be further reinforced through the use of mouldable thermo-plastic support strips on the inside and outside. These stiffening strips are available in two strengths: strong (white) and medium (skin-coloured).
The shoe comes with four white strips.
These provide even more lateral and rotational stability in the ankle joint area without hampering the natural rolling of the foot. The integrated rocker bar makes walking easier.

As with our other therapeutic shoes, individual shoe adjustments can be made with these models too.
The applications for the multi-support shoe include the ongoing treatment of ankle joint capsular ligament injuries which originally received conservative or surgical treatment, as well as capsular ligament insufficiency and Achilles tendon injuries. It is also suitable for immobilising the tarsal and mid-foot regions and for the ongoing treatment of fractures and arthrodesis.

Anti-varus shoes

for secure correction right from the start

At first, many children find it difficult to adjust to walking in anti-varus shoes. The stiffness of the shoe, which is a must from a therapeutic standpoint, is unaccustomed and makes walking more difficult because the foot is forced into the corrected position. However, experience has shown that children quickly become accustomed to the new feeling.

In cases of slight misalignment, therapy with anti-varus shoes can be supported by the following:

- Regular foot massage
- Suitable exercises
- Physiotherapy

It is important to continuously monitor the treatment progress in consultation with your doctor. The earlier your child receives the right care, the easier it will be to rectify the problem. Where each foot requires different care, shoes of differing widths and sizes can be combined.

Sickle foot and clubfoot orthosis

The sickle foot and clubfoot orthosis for babies is a corrective shoe-shaped orthotic device made of soft leather. To permit variable correction, the sole of the orthosis is divided into two parts. The rear foot is supported by a heel cap, while correction of the forefoot misalignment is done by fitting a tension spring at the other edge of the foot in the Lisfranc joint region. The attachment to the large toe's joint and the cuboid bone area at the outer edge of the foot guids the forefoot into the corrected position. The orthosis is mainly used for infants and toddlers in the crwaling age. After that, night splints may be used if further corrective treatment of the forefoot misalignment is necessary.

(not suitable for walking or standing)

Corrective accessory:
The pigeon toe orthosis for babies is delivered with mounted spring at normal tension, plus two springs for medium and maximum tension and a fastening element.

Depending on the prescription, either dynamic or fixed-position correction is implemented.

Baby sickle foot shoes

The sickle foot shoe for babies is equipped with a fixed degree of anti-varus correction. The shoe's outsole means that it is suitable for standing and walking. In case of one-sided sickle foot, a neutral shoe is available for the unaffected foot.

Sickle foot and clubfoot orthosis

The sickle foot and clubfoot orthosis is a passive corrective orthosis made of polyethylene and used to treat childhood sickele foot and previously treated club foot. The orthosis is a as night splints to correct the forefoot misalignment by the three-point principle. In case of a slight pointed-foot component, an additional thigh grip can be applied to achieve the desired 90° knee angle, thereby relieving the strain on the calf muscles.
